A Gratiot avenue doctor received a call the other evening from a couple who had not been in this country over a year, and who had decided to checkmate any danger from small-pox by vaccination. The husband bared his left arm and the operation was soon cempleted. He rolled up his other sleeve and held out his right arm.

'One arm is enough,' replied the doc-

'But I guess I takes two of 'em,' was the reply.

.What for? 'Why, dis one is for me and der odder one for my frow. It ish better dot I cotches all der small-pox myself. Go ahead mit your stabbing!"

The doctor did not succeed in convincing them that one could not be vaccinated for both, and the woman sullenly refused to let the lancet touch her arm.

Senator Conkling has received the following dispatch from . Thio :

COLUMBUS, O., May 30, 1881 You have the good wisnes of a hundred thousand Ohio Republicans. The officeholders and officeseekers only have thus far spoken. The voice of the Stalwarts was yet to be heard and that has even come for fair play and equality of rights. They are not so blinded by devotion to the administration as to concede to aid the privil ege of using executive patronage to enforce private animosity or elevate personal favorites and crush the men who led the party to victory. We recognize you as a clean-handed statesman, whose record has never been smirched by jobbing and corruption, and we bid you God speed in this struggle.

If you canot find a gentleman to marry grils, do not marry at all. Do not subject yourself to the mortificatins that would be sure to come with a busband who would continually cause you to blush for his lawless actions, for his slippery dealings or for his hypocritical polish. It is not sufficient that a man looks and dresses well; he must act and live well besides.
